Brief overview of the Master of Accounting program

The Master's Program in Accounting is a specialized program in advanced accounting. The program was established by Resolution No. (1460) at the end of 2024, in accordance with academic accreditation and quality assurance standards. The program's vision crystallized in achieving excellence and leadership at the local, regional, and international levels. Its mission, meanwhile, was to provide a highly qualified and skilled university education program in various modern accounting disciplines, consistent with the local, regional, and international Libyan labor market. The program seeks to develop and consolidate the scientific and knowledge base in line with modern developments, serving the development of Libyan society.

Values, Vision, Mission, and Objectives of the Master's Degree Program in Accounting

First: Values:

The program derives its values from the noble values of the Islamic faith, namely justice and the fulfillment of rights at work, teamwork, innovation and continuous improvement, competitiveness in education, and commitment to standards of excellence and leadership.

Second: Vision:

The Master's Program in Accounting seeks to achieve excellence and leadership at the local, regional, and international levels, by producing graduates who can become independent researchers capable of resolving accounting issues facing organizations in both the public and private sectors. This will help ensure a sufficient supply of specialized national academic cadres, with a quality comparable to that of international programs.

Third: Mission:

To provide a highly qualified and skilled university education program in various modern accounting disciplines, tailored to the local, regional, and international Libyan labor market.

Fourth: Objectives:

The program seeks to achieve the following objectives:

- Developing and consolidating the scientific and knowledge base in line with modern developments to serve the development of Libyan society.
- Meeting the needs of institutions, companies, and economic units in the private and public sectors for qualified and specialized accounting professionals.
- Assisting in expanding consulting skills and diversifying expertise in the accounting field to meet the challenges of a complex business environment.
- Contributing to the process of authoring, translating, and publishing in the field of accounting and related sciences.
- Contributing to addressing the problems of the local community and the national economy by directing the research of professors and students toward them.
